The Slovene Alpine landscape is one of those fragile environments which are – due to their precious wild nature, extreme weather and topographical conditions, built heritage, and distinct tradition – particularly sensitive to various interventions, especially architectural ones. Consequently, interventions in mountain ambients must be informed by long-term thinking; subordinate to the exceptional Alpine scenery in their form and materiality; respectful of the cultural context; and quantitatively restricted. Exhibition Slovene Alpine Architecture 2008–2018 showcases 30 finest achievements and greatest standouts in Slovene Alpine architectural production of the last ten years in the Alpine region as defined by the Alpine Convention. From the works nominated by curators Kristina Dešman, Maja Ivanič, and Špela Nardoni Kovač, international selector, Austrian architect Bernardo Bader chose the 22 top-ranked.

The exhibition will be open until 28 February 2019.
